Your business challenges

With the constantly evolving advancements in communications technologies, systems and uses, government agencies just like most major corporations are struggling to stay up to date. In today's technology-forward world, it's not just a matter of buying the latest equipment – that would be relatively simple. Government agencies need an IT partner with a track record of success with emerging technologies that facilitate the convergence of voice, data and video in the workspace and interface with next-generation converged networks.

How we can help

The EDS GSA Connections team was assembled with a singular objective: to provide a one-stop source for all government clients to acquire whatever communications tool or service they require with the most flexible means possible. With more than 40 years of experience serving government clients, EDS, an HP company, possesses the expertise, manpower and global experience to deliver the latest technologies available, as efficiently as possible. Whether your needs are communications equipment or consulting assistance on complex configurations that will perform to even the most demanding requirements, the EDS Connections team is poised to deliver.

What you can achieve

- Allows maximum flexibility to support product, labor and solutions requirements
- Delivers the latest communications technologies and modern innovations that leverage commercial best practices that are geared to your specific environment
- Simplifies purchasing process through online ordering
- Provides proven expertise in modernizing and integrating environments
- Assures fulfillment of small-business requirements, which are built into the contract.
